

Acknowledgements

This study is in its twelfth year. Since 1991 a large number of people have contributed time, effort, enthusiasm and skill to its success.

At the Policy Studies Institute, the authors' colleagues Louise Finlayson, Reuben Ford, Karen MacKinnon, Stephen McKay, Jane Perry and Alison Smith took the study through its seven stages. At the beginning Richard Berthoud provided early guidance and inspiration.

At National Opinion Polls (Social and Political) Tom Darwent, Nick Moon and Elaine Winter carried out the fieldwork and contributed crucially to the design of the survey instruments and data preparation. Many of NOP's team of interviewers saw the project through every stage and built relationships with their respondents that were invaluable to the success of the project.

At the Department for Work and Pensions, Tony Martin and later Dan Murphy took the project forward with vision and commitment. During this time, Stephen Morris, Anja Nickenig, Jane Sweeting, Elaine Squires and Ashley Kershaw all provided invaluable help, judgement and encouragement.

The greatest debt is to 900 families who gave a great deal of their time and patiently answered our questions for a decade.

The Authors

Alan Marsh is Professor of Social Policy at the University of Westminster and Deputy Director of the Policy Studies Institute.

Sandra Vegeris is a Research Fellow at PSI.